HISTORY IN YOUR HANDS

This is a historic house with a big difference – you can touch!

Step into the 1870s at the award winning Judge's Lodging to see how the world looked to the Victorian judges, their servants and felonious guests. Lit only by oil and gas lamps, wander through the judge's private apartments, sit in his armchair or at his dining table. Below stairs you can pump water in the kitchen or explore the servants' sleeping quarters and workrooms.

There are plenty of things to keep the little ones amused while you explore the period rooms: worksheets, activity chests and a special guidebook to help them discover and make them laugh.

'One of the world's most appealing small museums'
Dr John Davies, historian.

VOICES FROM THE PAST

Visitors are accompanied by an audio tour, eavesdropping on stories from the building's inhabitants. Hear from Mary the hardworking maid and Mr Luggar, the grumbling housekeeper, as they care for Richard Lister Venables, Chairman of the Magistrates (portrayed by the late actor, Robert Hardy).

Reverend Venables reminisces about the changes in his lifetime such as the arrival of photography and the coming of the railway. Down below, the prisoner awaiting trial complains about the rats in his cell to Constable Rogers.

THE LAW & ITS GUESTS

In the vast courtroom, your imagination is guided by the echoing trial of local duck thief, William Morgan. The damp basement cells below reinforce the building's true purpose.

Find out about the tragic tale of Mary Morgan who was hanged in the town, the rural Radnorshire Constabulary, the terrible state of Presteigne gaol and its great escapes. In stark contrast, learn about the luxurious lives of the judges. There's really no better place to discover the theatre of law!
